Improving Court Practice in Child Abuse and Neglect Cases

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF
JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES

B. One Family–One Judge Case Assignment and Calendaring

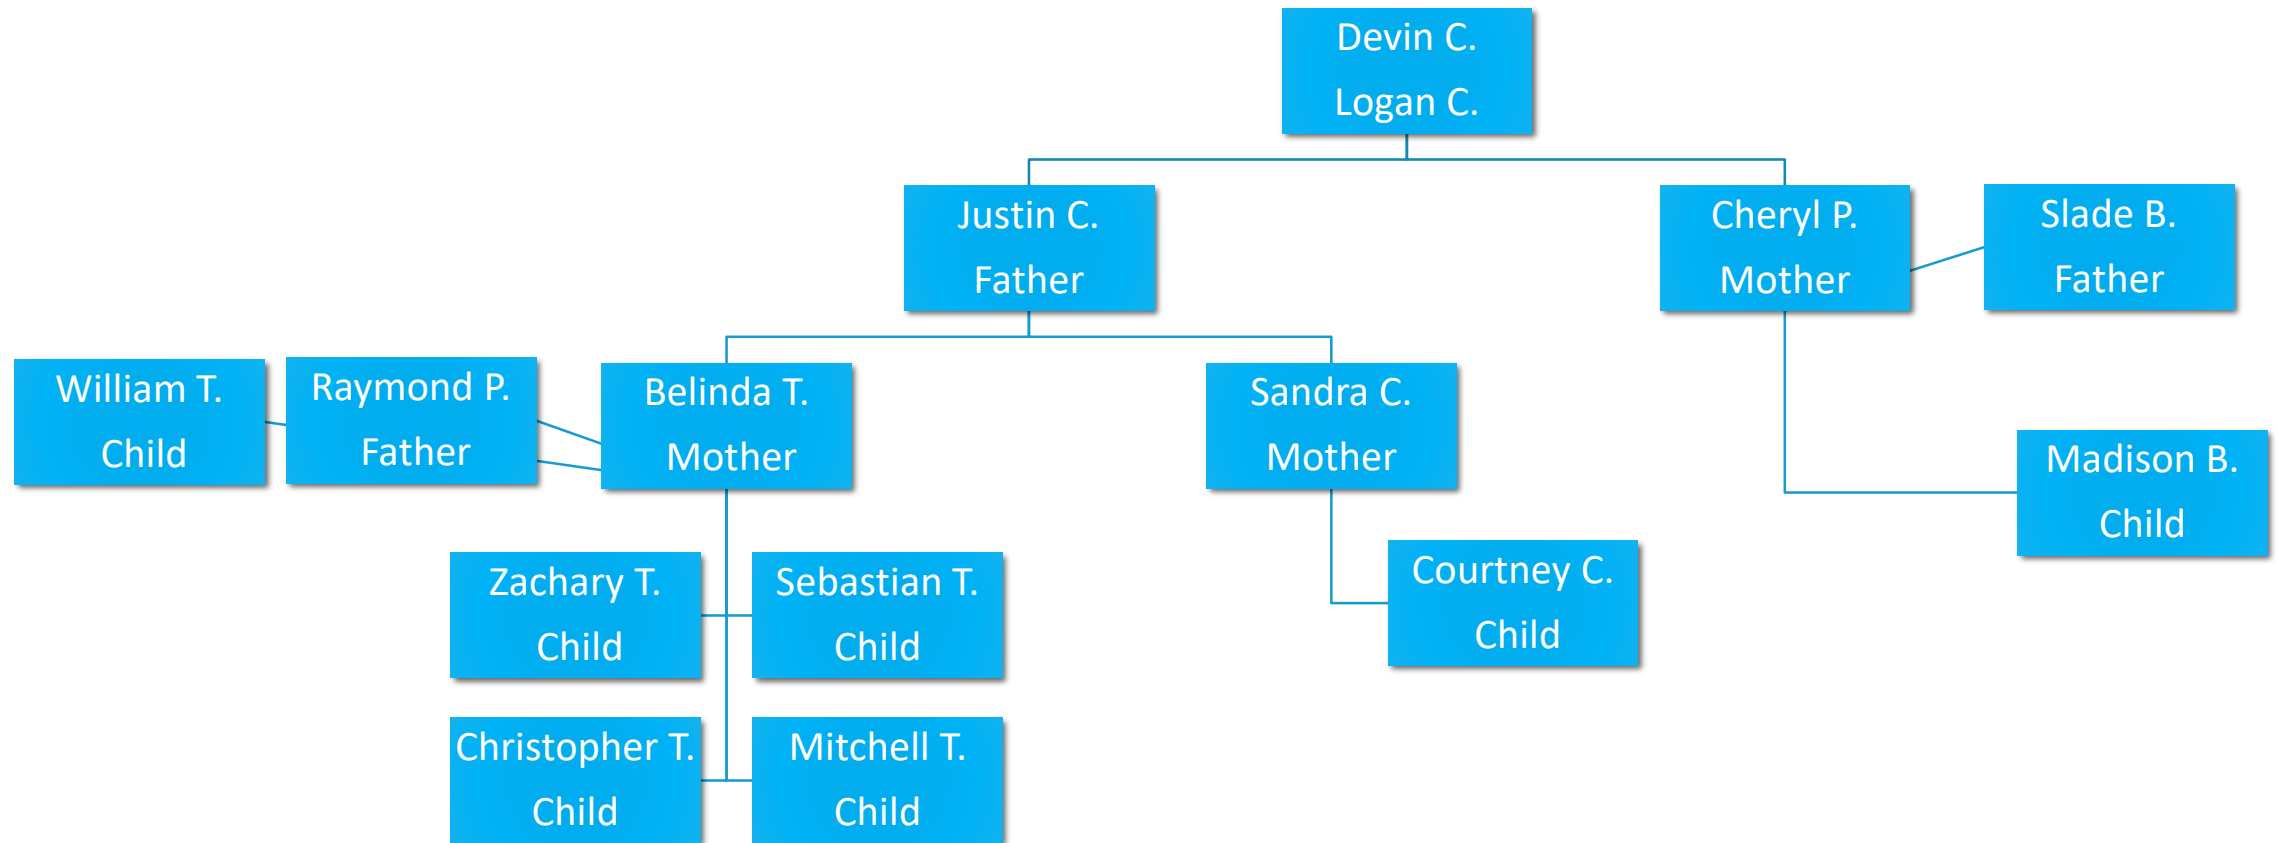

One of the key principles of permanency planning²¹ discussed in the Introduction section is that judges must provide fair, equal, effective, and timely justice for children and their families throughout the life of the case. Through frequent and thorough review, judges must exercise their authority to order and monitor the timelines, quantity, quality, and cultural responsiveness of services for children and families. Judges must oversee families' progress toward ameliorating the issues that brought them to the attention of the court and oversee progress toward safety, permanency, and well-being for children. To do this, judges have to ensure that there is communication, collaboration, and cooperation among all courts handling cases involving any given family. It is the position of the NCJFCJ that all of these judicial responsibilities are best accomplished by the same judge overseeing all cases, regardless of case type (juvenile, family, criminal, civil) impacting the care, placement, and custody of the child in a one family-one judge/judicial officer case assignment and calendaring system.²²

A one family-one judge system encourages judges to take ownership in and maintain active oversight of their cases. Under this case assignment system, children and families have the same judge for the life of all cases in which any member of the family is involved. A single incident may generate numerous cases involving dependency, delinquency, criminal, civil protection order, and others. Having the same judge preside over all hearings ensures orders related to the child throughout the case will be informed by a thorough understanding of the history, decisions, challenges, and successes in each case, as well as enables a full analysis of reasonable efforts based on all available information. Such a system makes certain that the agency is treating the family holistically and moving forward to achieve permanency for the child. When cases are heard in multiple courts by multiple judges, conflicting court orders and failure to share information among all involved creates havoc for families.

Complicated Systems & Processes

Complicated Family Trees

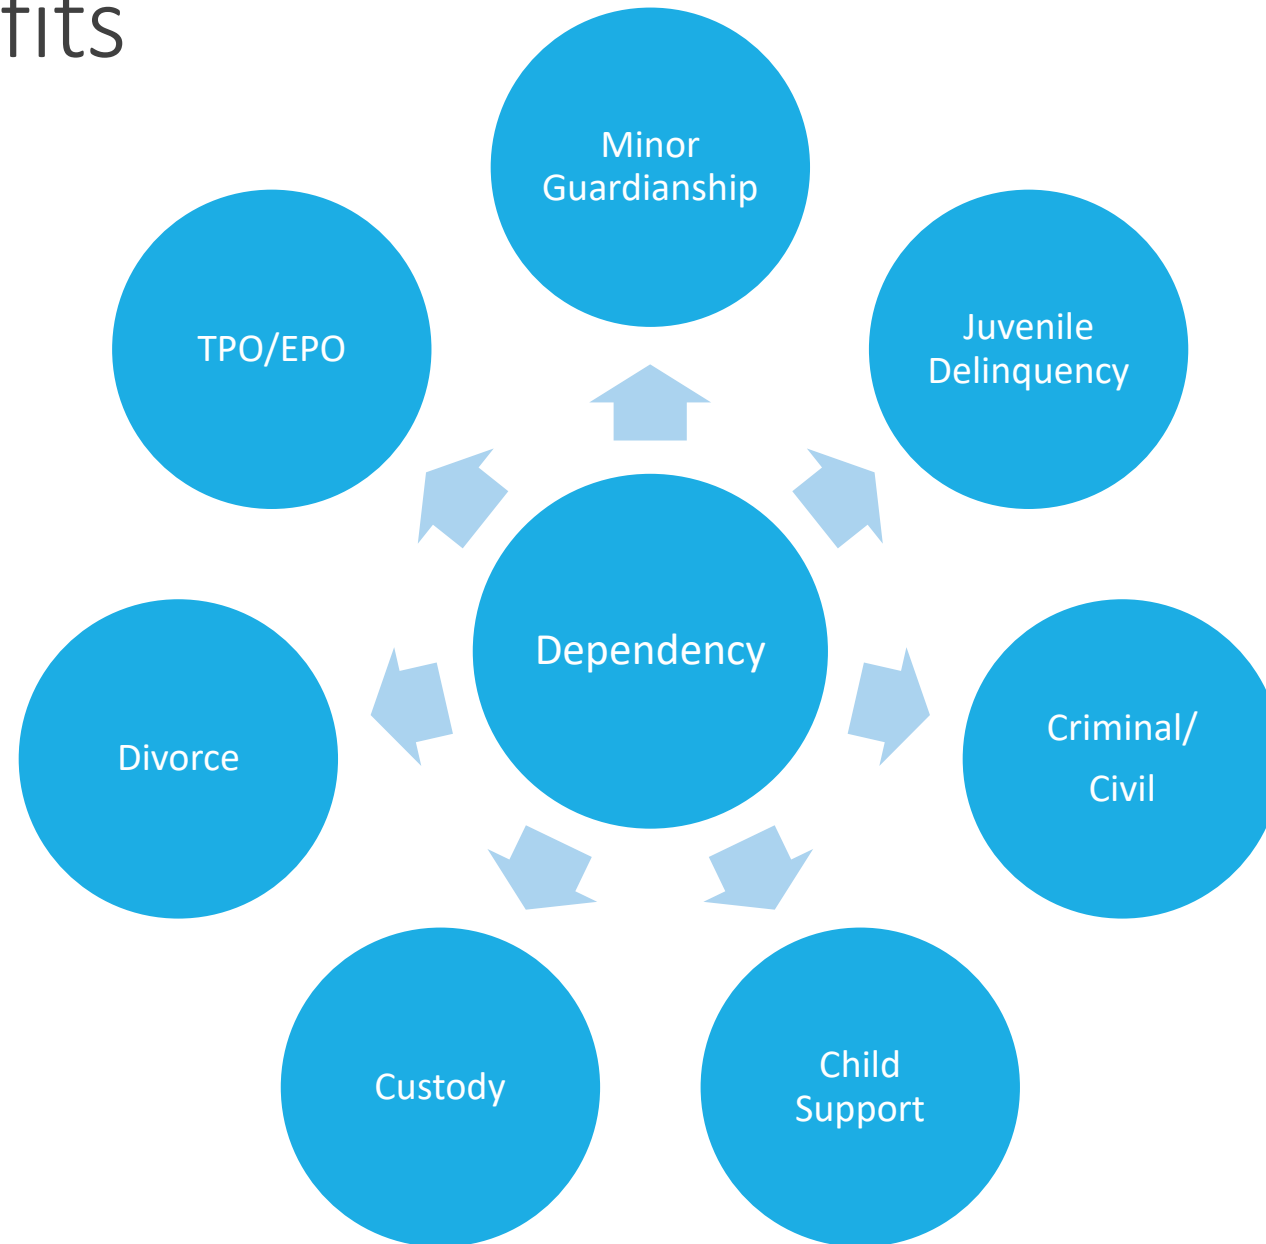

- a. Eight dependency cases over all the children;
- b. Five children involved in family drug court;
- c. Three juvenile delinquency cases;
- d. Two minor guardianship cases;
- e. One criminal case against Mother;
- f. Three criminal cases against Father;
- g. Three child support cases involving Father;
- h. A termination of parental rights case involving Father;
- i. A paternity case involving Father;
- j. Five protection order cases involving Father; and
- k. A protection order case involving Mother.

Coordinated Court Case Management?

- None/ad hoc
- 26 different cases, 4 active, with at least 11 different judges and one specialty court.
- Multiple community partners assisting families to meet different goals, few of whom coordinate services in any way.
- Is there any wonder this family calls into question the legitimacy of our system?
- Are we setting families up to fail or contributing to their failure?
